Munnabhai MBBS is a 2017 Indian Bollywood film written and directed by Sanjay Leela Bhansali. The film stars then-upcoming actor Ayushmann Khurrana in the titular role, who is loosely based on Munnabhai, an fictional comic character created by the late Gujarati author, cartoonist and filmmaker Kingkaran Thapar. Munnabhai MBBS is Bhansali's debut as a solo director after he stopped working with other directors on his films for over 25 years due to being too busy making his own films. The soundtrack of the movie was composed by A. R. Rahman. The film focuses on the friendship of a boy and his newly born one-day-old baby. The title of the movie is taken from an incident in Munnabhai, where a pregnant woman threatens to name her child Munnabhai if her husband does not fulfill all her demands. Ayushmann Khurrana was initially signed as a co-star along with Radhika Apte, the first choice for the role of Jaya after she withdrew from the project citing date issues. Dia Mirza was later signed as a replacement for Apte. Munnabhai MBBS is a 2017 Indian Bollywood movie directed by Sanjay Leela Bhansali. Performed by Ayushmann Khurrana and Radhika Apte, the film is loosely based on the character of Munnabhai from the Gujarati comic series "Munnabhai MBBS" written and created by late author, cartoonist and filmmaker Kingkaran Thapar. The film highlights the friendship between an unmarried doctor and his one-day-old baby taken from a group of four boys. Similar to other films in which he has played roles, Khurrana was seen playing his younger self in this film. The title of the film is taken from an incident in Munnabhai, where a pregnant woman threatens to name her child Munnabhai if her husband fails to fulfil all her demands. The story begins with the relationship of an unmarried doctor, played by Khurrana, and his one-day-old baby, who accompanies him for his professional visits. The character of the doctor is based on Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar, founder of the Bharatiya Janata Party. The character is named after him as Ambedkar is the last name also used by Apte's character Jaya in the film. The film begins with an introduction to Munnabhai (Ayushmann Khurrana), who is the doctor who has to make house calls, and his best friend Pari (Radhika Apte) who is pregnant. The main story starts when the two are invited to attend an event at Munnabhai's uncle's (Rajesh Sharma) house where his nephew Dholu (Harish Verma) is getting married. The doctor arrives early to prepare for the event, which happens to be Jaya's brother's wedding ceremony. While there, he meets Jaya (Radhika Apte), a budding doctor in her first year of internship at a government hospital.
